EARTH MONTH 2021

All Month Long

The University Honors Program presents:
A Fuller Saluki

Installation and inspiration to "make the world for 100% of humanity."

Artist and alumni Ben Lowder returns to campus April 21 to put the finishing touches on his installation at Bucky's Haven that celebrates the legacy of Buckminster Fuller. Honors Program student Gabe Bonansinga will share a multi-media meditation inspired by Fuller. The presentation component of this event will take place virtually. Please contact honors@siu.edu for a live event link. We encourage individuals and small groups to visit Bucky's Haven to view the completed installation.

Earth Month 2021

BY NICK ERWIN

At SIU, we think Earth Day is worth celebrating all month long. This year, although there are no costs involved, most of the activities require advance registration or signup as there are may be limits on the number of participants. Some events are just for students while the entire campus population is welcome at others so please check out the details beforehand. Find complete descriptions here.

Don't forget to follow us on social media for educational posts, written by Sustainability Office GAs, along with weekly updates.

Cooking Club:

Are you interested in trying a new recipe? What if we gave you all the ingredients needed for free? We're offering a plant-based cooking session available to current students. This should make enough for 2 full meals. After signing up, we'll send you a pickup time for the ingredients, recipe instructions, and a Zoom link to talk with the rest of the group about how it turned out.
